

Abstract

In a heat sink designed as a heat pipe, there is an interior space in a body of the heat sink that is closed toward the outside with at least one vapor channel or vapor space and at least one fluid space that is connected with the vapor space and has a porous or capillary structure.